

Contents

Executive Summary	4
Introduction	6
1. The advice backdrop in the UK today	8
1.1.The regulatory backdrop	9
1.2.Introducing the Advice Gap	10
1.3.Industry views	12
1.4.DIY Investing market	13
1.5.The current advice market from a customer perspective	16
2. Consumer research overview	18
2.1.What do people need help with?	19
2.2.Who uses advice and why?	23
2.3.What type of help do people want?	27
2.4.What role could employers have in providing advice?	31
2.5.What will people pay for investment help?	32
2.6.Retirement advice	37
3. The consumer definition of the Advice Gap	38
3.1.If I had 5 minutes with an adviser	39
3.2.Comparisons with Boring Money reader questions	41
3.3.Attitudes towards robo advice	44
3.4.What the questions reveal	46
4. Trust, confidence and Best Buy lists	50
4.1.Understanding the audience	51
4.2.People need and want help with fund selection	52
4.3.Are the Best Buy lists the primary source of fund selection information?	52
4.4.Confidence in Best Buy lists	54
5. Industry speak	56
5.1.What do you think execution-only providers could/should be allowed to do without taking advisory permissions?	57
5.2.How should regulations change?	58
5.3.DIY investing growth	59
5.4.Boring Money view	60
6. Conclusion	62